I Never Knew My Father: A Sexual Assault Monologue Kenni York

In observance of National Sexual Assault Awareness Month (April), this monologue is being shared as a mechanism of releasing myself from past hurts and helping someone else to find their voice to speak out. Every two minutes in America, someone is being sexually assaulted. A great percentage of sexual abuse victims are children. As a sexual abuse survivor it is my hope that my story will in some way impact the next person to speak out, let go, and move forward. If you know someone who may be struggling through this type of ordeal, I encourage you to pass this monologue along. No one deserves to be victimized.
